THE DAILY NEWS.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 13, 1878.

THE result in New Hampshire is the first echo from the Louisiana prosecutions.

A NATIONAL board of trade is the latest scheme proposed to do wonderful things for the country.

WILLIAM E. CHANDLER didn't go home to New Hampshire to vote. If he had the result might have been different.

THE Union Pacific is clear of drifts and trains are running from Ogden to Omaha, but the Denver Pacific and Colorado Central are still obstructed.

SUNSET Cox was yesterday allowed to air his stupid malignity again. If somebody would drop him into a congressional cuspidor the homocopathic fitness of the treatment would be apparent.

A DISPATCH from Milford, New Hampshire, dated March 12, says, "Two very distinct shocks of earthquake occurred here to-day." Decidedly, one was for the democrats and the other for Little Billee

CHANDLER will immediately begin another pamphlet on the result of the election in his native New Hampshire, Was it a bargain, sale, dicker, barter or what was it that kept the hosts from the polls, where they were to vindicate little billee?

IF advertising is the barometer of trade, business in New York is improving with a rush. The Herald on Sunday issued a quintuple sheet, containing twenty pages of six columns each. There were 3,130 different advertisements, filling 65 columns, enough to fill more than three papers the size of The News to-day. If any paper but the Herald would do such a thing, the tenth commandment would be broken in every newspaper office in the country, and even now it has probably been cracked several times.

THE example of the United States seems to be contagious. The khedive of Egypt sees our silver legislation, so to speak, and goes one better. He contemplates suspending payment entirely on Egyptian bonds. The French financier in charge has protested against any departure from the terms of the agreement with the bondholders. He seems to be under the impression that such departure would injure Egypt's credit. Possibly this is true with a country like Egypt, but with a country like the United States, which has "nothing to do with abroad," universal suffrage can, in the language of ex-Congressman Watterson, "decree soft-soap to be currency, if it likes."

THE reports of the New Hampshire election show a falling off in the total vote, which was to be expected, as the canvass has not been an exciting one. The indications are that the democrats have made slight gains, but that the republican candidates are elected. In 155 towns where Prescott had a majority of 4,657 last year, he now has 3,002, and the vote is 1,033 less. His majority over the democratic candidate last year was 4,034. His majority over the democratic candidate this year in 155 towns reported is 3,580. There were four tickets in the field yesterday, republican, democrat, greenback and prohibition, and the last two have. gained somewhat.

ABRAM S. HEWITT, chairman of the national democratic committee, Mr. Tilden's manager in the last political campaign, in his speech in congress criticizing President Haves's appointments, took occasion to say that President Hayes's title was perfect and unassailable; fraud or no fraud, that it rested on an act of congress and was as perfect as that of any preceding president. "For this," says the dispatch in yesterday's News, "Mr. Hewitt is severely criticised by a strong faction among the democrats, who believe it good policy to keep alive the question of Hayes's title, and by the personal adherents of Tilden." Ex-Governor Hendricks has made similar declarations publicly, and has also been severely criticised in some quarters, especially by the New York Sun, whose sole stock in trade is to croak "fraud." Able editors and correspondents of the republican persuasion might take a hint and drop the periodical cry about contesting President Hayes's title. What if it is contested? It is as unimpeachable as human work can be and such a contest would only overwhelm and bury beyond possibility of political resurrection any men or party attempting it. Have done with such nurserv tales.

The Exact Condition of the Papacy. The liberal Cardinal Pecci turned reac tionist Pope Leo XIII, certified his accession to King Humbert of Italy as "the king of Sardinia," and a Paris dispatch said that the consequence of a state of hostility on the part of the pope would be an abrogation of the laws of papal guaranties. The Italian council of state has informed the chamber of deputies that this law cannot be abrogated as it possesses a constitutional organic character. So the Paris dispatch was probably no no more than a reflex of the fealty that Pope Leo's bourbonish promises are strengthening the feeling of Italian unity, making it more and more impossible for the church to ever regain temporal sovreignty.

The inimitable character of the guaranty law itself, leaves the prelate less excuse for desiring to subvert the existing order of things, for by this law he is as sured an unmolested condition. It is under this law that Catholicism exists, so far as pretensions to temporal power anywhere are concerned, and although the popes have refused to recognize they have not dared to infringe upon it,

This law of papal guaranties was constructed after the organization of the kingdom of Italy and the establishment of the capital at Rome. It defines the relation of the government to the pope and the holy see. The first three articles declare the person of the pope inviolable, making attacks upon his person punishable as if they were upon the king himself. He is to receive royal honors on Italian soil and the precedence given him by Catholic sovereigns. The fourth and fifth articles grant the pope a yearly income from the state of $650,000. This Pio Nono refused, preferring to nurse the fiction that he was a state of $600,000. This Pio Nono refused, preferring to nurse the fiction that he was a prisoner and living on the voluntary contributions of the faithful. It gives the Vatican and Lateran palaces and the castle Gandolfo, outside the city, (whence the new pope has retired) to the perpetual use of the pope. The sixth article gives personal liberty to the cardinals during a vacancy in a see and a protection to the councils and conclaves against external violence. The seventh and eighth articles forbids any government officials entering the papal residence or any conclave or council without the pope's permission, and protects all papers of the pope relating to spiritual supremacy from examination or seizure. The next article gives the pope the right to exercise all his spiritual functions without let or hindrance. Article ten protects ecclesiastics engaged in the execution of those functions for the pope. The eleventh article puts envoys to the pope upon the same footing as envoys to the Pope upon the same footing as envoys to the Freedom of the pope's correspondence. The next protects the acclesiastical empiracies from interference The next article insures the freedom of the pope's correspondence. The next protects the ecclesiastical seminaries from interference by the minister of public education, and the last six articles define the relations of the state to the church. Restrictions on the meeting of catholic clergymen are removed. The government reserves the right of nomination to benefices and the right of appeal against any spiritual or disciplinary acts of ecclesiastical authority, though these are not to be executed or recognized by the civil power, and finally the church is restricted in making any enactments contrary to the laws making any enactments contrary to the laws of the state or injurious to public order or the rights of individuals.

One is at a loss to think of a fairer, more One is at a loss to think or a fairer, more liberal condition of things than this, and the Italian government has faithfully lived up to it in the past, as it has declared it must in the future, whether the pope does or not. Pius IX refused the government allowance and would recognize none of the guaranties and Leo XIII is giving disposition of following the same course. This is well for Italian units. The guaranties are so eminently just. the same course. This is well for Italian unity. The guaranties are so eminently just and liberal that to resist them makes no friends with the people who, however good Catholics they may be, are also Italians.

The time of the house was occupied with the discussion of the consular appropriation bill, during which Mr. Cox criticised Mr. Hewitt's speech of the previous day, saying that it was intended to quiet the president's title, but it would not do it. He proceeded to discuss the civil-service reform nolice, and said civil-service reform under the present Executive was a lame humbug, and both sides of the House knew it to be futile and foolish. The fountain of honor itself was poisoned. He enumerated various appointments under the present administration as specimens of civil-service reform. He characterized the civil-service system as a ton as specimens of civil service renorm. He characterized the civil-service system as a bundle of incongruities, based on false pretenses. They all knew how futile and foolish were the inconsequential and disobeyed orders to officials to abstain from all interference in politics. Hence the utter friendlessness of the administration, hence the retection of in politics. Hence the utter friendlessness of the administration; hence the rejection of the president by both parties, as a foundling over whose political birth the bar sinister would ever hang. Rev. F. A. Spencer, of New York, writes that "Bob" Ingersoll's father was his early pastor and was a good man "in the judgment of charity, but very far from being a perfect christian." The mother died when the infidel was very small. The father was hotblooded, and violent. He once knocked his horse down in the public street. Then he took in a second wife, who packed up her kit and one 'kitten' at the end of a year and left the pastor. Two years later he removed to the pastor. Two years later he removed to Ohio, had a third wife for a year and was left by her. And Spencer thinks this early experience was the seed of the evil fruit into which "Bob" has blossomed.

TOM EDISON.

The Early Operating Days of the Great Electrician—Discharged at Memphis as a Lunatic—His Latest Invention, the

honograph. [New York Sun.] [New York Sun.]

The marvellous discoveries of Prof. Thomas A. Edison of Menlo Park, N. J., have excited universal interest. His stock indicator, automatic and duplex instruments, telephone, electro-motograph. airograph, electric pen, and above all, his speaking machine, mark him as the Napoleon of inventors. Indeed, at the Professor's age, Bonaparte had barely reached the rank of first consul. As any particulars concerning the history of this extraordinary young inventor must prove of more than usual interest, the writer details a conversation with Mr. George S. Stewart, better known as Fattie Stewart, an old telegraph operator, now employed in the office a conversation with Mr. George S, Stewart, better known as Fattie Stewart, an old telegraph operator, now employed in the office of the Associated Press:

"I first knew Tom Edison," said Mr. Stewart, "in 1866. At that time I was an operator in Tennessee. Tom was employed by Col. Coleman, the superintendent of the Western Union office in Memphis. He was a gawky boy, about 18 or 19, and was reading everything about electricity that he could pick up. He had a lean and hungry look, and always seemed to be under the influence of some secret excitement. He had got into his head the idea of sending duplex dispatchee, and all his spare time was devoted to experiments in the office. Coleman stood it for a long time, but at last began to growl. He allowed that Tom was crazy, and said that 'any damned fool ought to know that a wire can't be worked both ways at the same time.' He declared he wouldn't have Tom pottering around the office with such silliness, and can t be worked both ways at the same time. He declared he wouldn't have Tom pottering around the office with such silliness, and finally discharged him in disgust. The boy went back home to some town in Michigan, and I lost track of him.

Some time afterward I was transferred to the Boston office. At that time wire No 1, as it was called, was considered the crack wire of the country. The fastest men were working it. For some cause the operator in Boston resigned: It was difficult to find a man to take his place. A half dozen fellows tried it, but found it too much for them. One after another they dropped it like a hot potato, and sloped wiser than when they came. There was a man in the office named M. F. Adams. He thought the world of Tom Edison, and recommended him for the place, vouching for him as a first class operator. G. F. Milliken, the manager, telegraphed to the little texan in Michigan. vouching for him as a first class operator. G. F. Milliken, the manager, telegraphed to the little town in Michigan, asking Tom if he would come on and accept the position. Tom answered yes, and without further words started for Boston, via the Michigan Central and Grand Trunk railroads. In running Canada he got snowed under, and was kept in one spoton the track for 24 heurs, cold and hungry, without a bed. As usual he owned but one suit of clothes and that, was on his back. Unfortunetly it was a summer suit.

hungry, without a bed. As usual he owned but one suit of clothes and that was on his back. Unfortunately it was a summer suit. He might have frozen to death had he not bought an old rough roundabout overcoat from a Canuck railroad laborer. But he finally got through all right.

"I was in the Boston office when he arrived, and I must say," continued Mr. Stewart, bringing his fist down upon the table, "he was the worst looking specimen of humanity I ever saw. The modern telegraph tramp isn't a marker. He wore a pair of jeans breeches six inches too short for him, a pair of very low shoes, the Canuck jacket, and a broad brimmed butternut hat, a relic of his life in Memphis. The wide rim was badly torn, and hung down so that you could see his ear through the opening. There was the slightest trace of dirt on his upper lip, that he called a moustache. His hair hadn't been combed for a week, and he wore the blackest white shirt that was ever seen on the back of a human being. Nervously pinching his upper lip.

white shirt that was ever seen on the back of a human being. Nervously pinching his upper lip—a habit that he had—he inquired for the manager, and was sent to Milliken.

"'Are you the boss?' Tom asked. Milliken smiled and said he was manager. Tom then introduced himself and asked when they wanted him to go to work. Milliken stared at him as though he couldn't believe his ears, and said 'At half past five.' It was then well along in the afternoon. Tom began to look around the office for a clock, and Milliken said: 'Young man, you have to work a pretty heavy wire.' Tom gave what he called his moustache an extra wist, and with all the assurance in the world, blurted out, 'All right, boss. I'll be here at half past five.' He sloped so quick that it made Milliken's head swim.

The operators burst into a peal of laughter. They had seen and heard everything, and their remarks were anything but complimenary to Tom. "Oh," said one of them, "He won't last as long as that Jerseyman that tackled the wire the other day. "Why, that fellow can't read by paper, let alone by sound," shouted another. A third declared that Tom was the worst he ever saw, and when a fourth wondered "whether the walking between Michigan and Boston was very good," there was a general roar.

Michigan and Boston was very good," there was a general roar.

"Well," coutinued Stewart, "half-past five came, and so did Tom. Every body was on the qui vive. Milliken was just taking from the vault the supply of blanks for the night operators. As Tom came up he pointed to a pile of them, saying, "Take what blanks you want and I'll show you your table." Tom innocently picked up the whole bundle and followed Milliken to his table. The operators began to grin and snicker. They all followed Milliken to his table. The opera-tors began to grin and snicker. They all thought that he would get bounced after trying to catch one message. It was the No. 1 wire to New York. Jerry Borst, then considered one of the fastest send-ers in the country worked the New York.

Borst, then considered one of the fastest senders in the country, worked the New York end. As Tom seated himself he heard the call 'B,' and turning to Milliken asked if that was the call for Boston. 'Yes,' replied the manager, watching Tom's movements with intense curiosity. Thereupon Tom opened his key and ticked the answer, 'I, I.' Jerry began to 'whoop 'em up' in his best style, and every eye was turned on Tom. He displayed no anxiety, but kept right along at his work as though he had been taking Jerry all his life. For four mortal hours did Jerry keep it up a hundred pounds to the square inch. it up a hundred pounds to the square inc and four mortal hours did Tom take it dow in a handwriting as neat and plain as reprix For the first time in his life Jerry had rush it until he was tired without a break from the receiver. He was astounded. When he had finished the following messages passed between them:

FROM JERRY. Who the devil are you, anyhow? FROM TOM I'm the new man. My name is Tom Edison.

FROM JERRY. Well by [a ripper], you're the man' I've been looking for for the last ten years, and you're the only man I ever found who could take me without a break. Shake.

cluded yesterday. The decision will be rendered next Monday.

"And they shook. The astonishment of the boys in the office was unbounded. There was no more jibing or snickering. Everybody was Tom's friend at once. The next day Milliken picked up a sheet of Tom's manuscript, and reflectively stroking his long beard, he said: "I never saw such pretty copy. He's as good an operator as I ever saw."

"At the close of the first night's work, Tom's friend Adams took him home with him. The first question asked was: "What kind of a man is this Milliken? Do you think he'll let me experiment in the office when I'm not on duty?" Adams replied that Milliken himself was somewhat of an inventor, and he thought that he would not only let Tom experiments as much as he pleased, but that he would also take a personal interest in his experiments. The very first trial was the duplex dispatches that gave Tom the reputation of a lunatic in Memphis, and caused him to lose his situation. Milliken, unlike Coleman, entered into the spirit of the thing, and in a short time Tom had so far perfected it that he worked it quite successfully between New York and Boston. But to accomplish this he spent, every dollar he carned for material for his experiments, and when the grand secret was discovered hadn't money enough to pay for filing a caveat for a patent."

Stewart says that many persons witnessed Tom's experiments. Among others he mentions James G. Stearns, then president of the Franklin telegraph company. He appears to have dropped upon Tom's secret and he had money enough to carry out Tom's ideas. At all events he got a patent ahead of Tom and reaped a large proportion of the benefits. Today his instrument is used extensively in this country and in Europe, and he is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. Tom, however, got full credit for the invention of the duplex system, through the news and editorial columns of the Telegrapher, a newspaper directed to electric science, edited by J. M. Ashley, now of the Journal of the Telegraph. It was Tom's first newspaper notoriety, and he was greatly elated. He flourished a dozen copies of the paper over his head, and announced his intention of mailing them to Coleman, "to show him that the damned fool had actually succeeded in sending messages both ways at the same time on the same wire."

But Tom jumped from one invention to another, apparently utterly regardless of their pecuniary value. It was while he was in the Boston office that he invented the gold and stock telegraph indicator now in general use. In this case he pursued his experiment privately, and had money enough to get the invention patented. To-day it returns him a handsome royalty.

(Philadelphia Record.) "I would rather be the inventor of that little apparatus than president," and the speaker pointed to small cast-iron framework standing on a table in the private office of Henry Bentley, at third and Chestnusstreets. The little apparatus alluded to was Edison's phonograph, which is a miracle in the world of invention. It consisted simply of an iron cylinder, traversed by a continuous hair indentation, over which was smoothly placed a delicate and sensitive covering of tin foil. A disc about the size of a watch, withanhole in its center about one-half inch in diameter, constitutes the frame work of the speaking apparatus. Over this hole is delicately adjusted a diaphragm of photographic iron, from the back of which projects a small steel needle secured to a rubber spring. This is so adjusted that the neeale gently touches the tin foil covering of the cylinder. The mouth is placed close to the aperture in the circular disc, and, while speaking, the cylinder is revolved. The force of the voice on the diaphragm causes the needle to vibrate, and this causes slight indentations to be made in the foil covering the cylinder. For instance:

At the private exhibition vesterday the "I would rather be the inventor of that

At the private exhibition yesterday the operator, seizing the crank, slowly revolved the cylinder, and, placing his mouth to the speaking apparatus, recited the lines "Mary had a little lamb," etc.,

"Mary had a little lamb," etc., supplemented by a demonic laugh, and "Oh! oh! Whoop! 1878. How is this?"

The tin foil showed a continuous line of very fine indentations. The cylinder was turned back to the starting point, and a funnel was placed over the hole in the mouthpiece, and the cylinder was again put in motion.

The result was simply marvellous. In a distinct tone, with the peculiar enunciation of the person who had spoken the lines, came the words of

"Mary had a little lamb," etc.

"Oh! Oh! Whoop. 1878. How is this?"
It was like the voice of a very young child, but it was very plain and distinct. This repetition of the lines spoken was simply caused by the needle passing over the indentations on the tin foil made when the words were spoken, and caused the diaphragm to vibrate over again as when the sound was first thrown upon it. No electricity or any power is necessary, the whole invention consisting only of iron, the foil and the vibrating diaphragm with its needle.

The use this machine can be put to is manifoff. A business man desires to leave instructions for his clerk, who is out. He sits down to the phonograph and pours into its monthpiece all he desires to say to his clerk and goes out; subordinate comes in an hour later, or the next day or year, and places the trumpet over the hole and starts the instrument, and every word that was uttered was repeated.

"That is a mighty good thing for newspa-

"That is a mighty good thing for newspaper men," said a member of the guild, who was present. "Imagine I had one in my office, I come down early in the morning disgusted with a leafer in the morning issue, and, fearing my wrath will ooze out before the guilty wretch who penned it appears, I will sit down to the phonograph and give him the benefit of my feelings in this wise: "Why, in the name of Heaven, did you occupy two-thirds of a column with claptrap platitudes thirds of a column with claptrap platitudes on the weather. My dydrant froze day before yesterday, and my butter spoiled last night. Give Probs blue blazes to-morrow. This thing can not be put up with. Some-thing strong this time, or beware. 'I can go home relieved," he continued, "knowing that he will get blowed up by a machine which can not change a word or alter the emphasis."

Mr. Edison has also discovered a new element, made from the smoke of coal oil, which he condenses and uses as a vibrator in the tube of his telephones. This is wonder-fully sensitive, and a mere whisper will be transmitted by ordinary telegraph wire a distance of 20 or 30 miles. In fact, Mr. Bentley, at his office at Third and Chestnut streets, heard Mr. Edison breathing in German-ence, and his remarks on both occasions were able.

Warrick county has been the place of six suicides within the past three months. The last two have been reconciled to the victims by their faith in spiritualism, it appears. About two months ago Mrs. Dillingham committed suicide—taking morphine—thinking her condition in the spirit land would be much bettered, as she had some trouble with her husband and her family. For the past two weeks the spiritualists—Mrs. D. was one—have been holding seances, at which Miss Nancy Lee had been attending. She was a good friend of Mrs. D., and mourned her death very much. At several of these seances Miss Lee "held converse," through the mediums, with her suicided friendy who stated that her condition was much bettered, etc, Last Thursday morning Miss Lee was found dead in her bed. A letter was tied to her bed post; also, one in her bureau drawer, and some morphine was found by the side of a tin cup of water near the bed. The letter gave as a reason for the act that the writer thought she would be happier with her friend's spirit in the great beyond. She was fifteen. Her parents are heartbroken and could scarcely realize that she had poisoned herself even when they saw the letter. No other cause can be thought of by her parents or anybody than the one spoken in the letters. So, this being her dying testimony, it bears heavily towards the truth. If spiritualism teaches suicide to better any condition it should be carefully handled.

The lay of the state house: "All that remains of a fallen tower."—[Wilkins Micawber.

Mr. Ora Pearson yesterday tendered his resignation as leader of St. Paul's choir, to take effect immediately.

This morning about 8 o'clock the fire department was called out to suppress a ten cent blaze in a pile of rubbish in a tenement house on South West street, near Merrill.

F. W. Baugher, hide dealer, No. 16 West Pearl street, in counting up his stock, finds himself short $150 in pelts and furs. An em-ploye, whom he suspects to be the thief, has skipped.

J. A. Sonders, representing a committee of Newport citizens, writes to the adjutant gen-eral for instructions in organizing a militia company at that place. They want breech-loading muskets.

The county commissioners are trying to economize, and propose to begin by refusing to allow a lot of small bills for extras about the jail, such as clothing and boots and shoes for the prisoners, etc.

The Alpha dramatic society, composed of members of the Knights of Father Matthew, will give a free entertainment to their friends on St. Patrick's night, at St. John's hall. The plays for the occasion are "A gentleman from Ireland" and "Two to One."

Col. French, district superintendent of the postal railway service, this morning announces that there will be no weighing of mails on railroads or at the Union depot this spring. The small army of applicants for weighers's position can therefore subside.

Argument on the motion for a new trial in Argument on the motion for a new trial in the Greenley case is progressing languidly in the criminal court room. The prisoner's counsel base strong hopes of securing a new trial on a supreme court decision rendered yesterday, touching certain legal points relating to the filing of affidavits for continuance.

A morning paper says that many people are wondering how the state house commissioners will find out the name of the architect to whom the award is made, and proceeds to enlighten them. The commissioners already know the authorship of every plan, having derived that important and valuable information from The News several months ago.

Arrested or Requisition.

Joseph Roberts, the lumber dealer was arrested last evening on a requisition from Governor Hartranft charging him with being a fugitive from Pennsylvania justice. The warrant was served by deputy sheriff George McGowan of Philadelphia. It is charged that Roberts left Philadelphia several years ago to avoid the payment of $8,000 awarded his wife in a divorce suit rendering himself liable to criminal prosecution by the act. Roberts claims that the indictment was brought and the arrest made at the instigation of a son and grandson to bleed him out of money, and he proposes to ligitate vigorously for his shekels. The gentlemen has long been an active business man in this city, and is reputed to bequite wealthy. He will be brought before Judge Williams at 5 o'clock this afternon for identification, and taken to Pennsylvania on an evening train.

A CELEBRATED CASE.

The Grand opera house was well filled with a fine audience last night to witness the second representation of "The celebrated case" by the admirable Union square company of Shook & Palmer. The piece is one that can be seen many times with pleasure, as all the leading parts are taken by artists, and it is impossible to appreciate all the points at one sitting. The characters were each well taken. Mrs. Marie Wilkins, who, by the way was the original La Frouchard of "The two ophans," contributed materially to the denoument by her fine acting in the last scene, where she exposes Mornay. The play ran very smoothly last night and was concluded a little earlier than on the previous evening. To-night it will be presented for the last time and, no doubt, to a full house.

LINDE'S READING.

LINDE'S READING. The reading of Julius Cæsar by Mr. Hermann Linde at Masonic hall last night was equal and in some respects superior to that given in Plymouth church. The audience given in Plymouth church. The audience-was not large enough to prevent a disagreea-ble echo in the hall, notwithstanding all precautions. Nevertheless the reading was greatly enjoyed by all who attended. In the oratorical passages of the play, Mr. Linde's grand voice and fine presence invested the text with new interest and beauties. He yet lacks a little of perfection in his pronunciation of English, but in modulations and shading, whereby the subtle meaning of the author is brought to light, Mr. Linde's voice is seldom equaled.

THE NINTH PRESBYTERIANS.

The NINTH PRESETTERIANS.

The concert and festival at Harmonic hall last night was a success. The Cecelian glee club and Miss Hensley furnished the music. Mrs. Charles recited from her own poems, and Messrs. Eddy, West and Smith, gave the funny "Hoosier school-master." The entertainment will be continued to-night with new attractions.

THIS EVENING.

"The celebrated case" at the Grand opera house; a concert at the Grace M. E. church, in which Miss Clara Reinmann will bear the principal part; entertainment at the First Presbyterian church, by the children of the Orphans aid society, in which Miss Maude Grubs will give readings.

To-night's program at Central avenue tab-ernacle will be the tour of Europe, Washing-ton city to Rome, including scores of interest-ing sights.

THE MIGHTY DOLLAR. The sale of reserved seats began at Benham's this morning for "The Mighty Dollar," which will be given the first three nights of next week. It is not necessary to commend the Florences to an Indianapolis audience. They are too well known to need it, as is the Olympic comment by which they are supported. pic company by which they are supported. Their play filled the Academy on its first presentation here, and the same result may be expected this time, at the Opera house particularly as the piece has been considerably polished and improved since.

M'CULLOUGH. Friday and Saturday of next week. John McCullough, the celebrated tragedian is billed for the grand opera house.

John Reno.

Jack Reno, the express robber, the last of the gang, is in the city, having come here to get a copy of the requisition that brought him from Missouri, where he has just finished a ten year's term in the penitentiary, to be put upon trial for the robbery of the Adams express company on the O. & M. road, near Seymour, about 12 years ago. He talks quite freely about his case and says he has no doubt that he will come out of it all right and be a free man again. He is now under $18,000 bonds in the Jackson county court for his appearance and says he can not travel around much, as his sureties like to have him around hardy when he is needed. "I'm a rattling good stonecutter," he told a News reporter, "and have put up a shed at Seymour, where I intend to go to work. I learned the work over there, (meaning at the Missouri penitentiary) but it may take me awhile to get the run of the work, as over there I worked on what is called cotton stone, which is much easier to cut than the stone here." He said that when he came up he had at first thought to ask Horace Scott, of the Jeffersonville road, for a pass, but being uncertain as to the reception that official would give to his request in view of past difficulties had concluded to pay his fare.

Reno is a well-preserved man of medium hight, has shrewd wrinkles at the corners of his eyes, is an easy conversationist, and talks of his experience in prison and out with the utmost nonchalence. He says, however, that he has had enough punishment, and is wil-Jack Reno, the express robber, the last of

He paid a visit to the female reformatory yesterday, where he saw and conversed with Mrs. Rittenhouse, Mrs. Miller and several other women formerly connected with the gang. He says the minions of the law have made a clean sweep, all his former colleagues, male and female having been gathered into the penal institutions of the state, Architectural Shrieking.

A startling rumor prevailed in architectural circles last night that the state house commission had secretly determined to adopt the plan of C. W. Eppinghausen, of Terre Hante. The fellows who were "standing in" with the other architects thereupon formed an alliance and proposed to charter the press of the city for a week or two for the purpose of shrieking rings, conspiracies additions, divisions and silence, and such other choice yawps as might be thought of from time to time, supplemented by several cords of affidavits calculated to everlastingly "bust" things. Later it was found that the report lacked confirmation, and the excitement in a measure subsided. To-day it revived to some extent and the architects are buzzing about at a great rate, prepared to tip up a hemisphere unless things go their way. The commissioners are said to be getting ready to be engulfed in mud as soon as the award is made. Architectural Shrieking.

The following are abstracts of the decisions made March 12: NEW TRIAL-EX PARTE AFFIDAVIT-TRIAL BY

Wm. H. Heuston vs. Augustus H. Bruner, et al. Fayette C. C. Affirmed. Biddle, C. J.
Held (1.) An ex parte affidavit of a witness can not, over an objection, be read in eridence on a final trial. (2). On a complaint for a new trial, the pafties have no right to a trial by jury. It is not a trial of the 'issues as decide whether a new trial shall be granted or not. The statute provides thot the question, "shall be summarily decided by the court, upon the evidence produced by the parties." (2 R. S. 1876, 183, sec. 35c.) (3). We think the finding of the court is fully supported by the evidence. (4). As to the requisites of a complaint for a new trial, and the sufficiency of the evidence in such cases, see the following authorities: 25 Ind 236; 42 Ind., 164; 40 Ind., 280; 51 Ind., 106; 53 Ind., 174. OCCUPYING PLAINTIFF.

John W. Westerfield, administrator, etc., etc., Addison D. Williams, administrator, ets. Madison. C. C. Reve sed. Niblack J.

A reversed judgment against B for $121.52. Certain land belonging to B is levied upon by the sheriff and sold to C. by virtue of an execution issued on said judgment for the sum of $510.00. After satisfying A.'s judgment, the remainder of the purchase money was applied to the payment of other judgments. B. subsequently brought suit against C. and recovered back the land, after valuable improvements had been made thereon. B and C both die, and the administrator of C filed a claim against the cetate of C for the amount of the purchase money for said hand and the value of the improvements. Held, (1) That there was a good claim for at least the amount of the purchase, paid by C., which was applied on the judgment and execution on which the land was sold. (4 Littell, 244; 3 Blackf., 293; 8 Blackf., 432; 9 Ind., 1; 15 Ind., 134; 24 Ind., 255; 26 Ind., 173.) B. having recovered back the land, it would be inequitable to permit him to retain both the land and the benefit of the purchase money. (2) It was error in the lower court to admit evidence of and take into consideration the value of the improvements on said land in estimating the amount of the plaintiffs claim. It is only through what is known as the occupying claimant law, which is of statutory origin, that the occupant of land under such circumstances can recover any compensation for his improvements. (3 Blackf., 82; 36 Ind., 463.) C. should have proceeded under the law mentioned when the land was recovered back from him by B. Judgment reversed.

TAXATION OF COSTS-KILLING STOCK.

TAXATION OF COSTS-KILLING STOCK.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cincinnati railroad company vs. Leander Clark. Delaware, C. C. Affirmed. Howk, J.

It is provided in section 401 of the practice act that "when the plaintiff shall, at the same court, bring several actions against the defendant upon demands which might have been joined in one. (2 R. S. 1876, 146.) This provision does not apply to demands which might have been joined in one. (2 R. S. 1876, 146.) This provision does not apply to demands which might have been joined in one. (2 R. S. 1876, 146.) This provision does not apply to demands as they accrue, and they are subsequently consolidated it is proper to overrule a motion to tax the costs of all but one suit against the plaintiff, up to the time of such consolidation. (2.) We think it was the intention of the act of March 4th, 1863, to confer power upon the circuit court in actions brought before justices of the peace against a railroad company to recover damages for stock killed, and appealed to to that court, to grant a rule against an agent of such company requiring him to appear before the court at a certain time and answer as to his receipts of moneys belonging to such company. The object of the act in this regard is to provide the means for enforcing the collection of judgments against a railroad company for the killing or injury of animals, rendered under the provisions of said act. (1 R. S. 1876, 753.)

Last night Patrolman Splann arrested Bob White, alias John Curtis, a hotel worker, and slated him on a charge of vagrancy. White was arrested at the Grand hotel about a year and a half ago and a few hours after his incarceration managed to escape through the pasteboard station house. This morning he was given his liberty on condition that he would leave the city and not return.
